UNION UNIVERSITY

Concerned individuals and organizations significantly shape the life and work of any great institution. At Union University, members of leadership societies contribute vital support. Each gift ensures Union's future as a leading private Christian institution of higher learning.

On the following pages are the names of those who made gifts between September 1, 2003 and August 31, 2004. Donors who have requested anonymity are not listed.

The University community gratefully acknowledges these financial contributions, and the many gifts of precious time each year from volunteer and support groups. It is an honor to list the members of these organizations alongside our financial contributors.

Union University is a member of the Evangelical Council for Financial Accountability (ECFA), an alliance of more than 1,000 evangelical ministries. ECFA holds its members to the highest standards of Christian ethics and stewardship in fund raising, financial accounting and reporting.

The following list represents what is believed to be accurate information, but it is possible that some names have been omitted or listed incorrectly. If this is the case, please notify the Office of University Relations at 731.661.5050 or toll free 800.338.6644. Such corrections will be listed in a future issue of the Unionite.

J. Daryl Charles

Associate Professor of Christian Studies, Union University

From street theater in Canada to criminal justice work in Washington, D.C., with stops at Princeton, Taylor and Baylor universities along the way, Dr. Daryl Charles' diverse journey has now brought him to Union University.

For Charles, Union's compelling draw was finding the university's vision embodied in the vision of the Christian studies department. He was attracted by the university's genuineness in equipping emerging Christian leaders ready for the market place.

"The president and the university are serious in attempts at integration [faith and learning], it's not just in the promotional literature," said Charles, "I can contribute my gifts here and experience being part of something bigger than myself."

Charles lists the commitment to the teacher-scholar, President David S. Dockery's leadership and his attitude toward Christian scholarship as other aspects that impress him about Union.

"I consider it forward thinking and in line with my personal calling to classic Christian liberal arts education," said Charles.

He laments that higher education among secular as well as Christian institutions appears to be going more the way of big business and subsequently is losing its identity.

"Two tendencies are observable: the financial 'bottom line' driving everything and an identity crisis, where most schools do not know what their identity is or should be," Charles said. "Most presidents are managers or PR people, few embody vision."

In the classroom Charles wants students who are "hungry to learn."

"I desire motivated students, not necessarily brilliant ones," he said, "I'd rather teach a hungry seeker than an indifferent believer."

He challenges students to ask critical questions and embrace complexity.

"I want students to wrestle with complexity, be inquisitive," Charles said, "examine assumptions that undergird ideas and opinions."

He acknowledges that today's society holds a false split in sacred and secular.

"We must see the cosmic dimensions of Christ's lordship, that all realms of reality are to be redeemed, not merely the narrowly spiritual or the soul. This, after all, is authentic integration," said Charles.

That is what is behind his thought in urging students toward the gate-keeping vocations—vocations that Charles feels "evangelicals have tended to avoid."

"We are to engage culture and become social and legal theorists, ethicists, economists, or be involved in media and journalism, the information industry, theater," he said.

"Our calling is not to flee the culture, but return to it."

"It goes back to confessional resources held by early Protestants: work is a ministry in excellence. Whether it is plumbing, social analysts, policy makers or cabinet makers, all of it is sacred." ☞

Stephanie Lee '98

*Ph.D. candidate
Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.*

Examining the link between academic preparation and college attendance of minority students is a mission for Stephanie Lee, a 1998 learning foundations major and former director of student leadership at Union.

"I have an interest in studying black student college enrollment patterns for higher ed.," said Lee. "What happens in K-12 and what are the influences to inspire them for college."

Lee is working on a Ph.D. in education policy at Vanderbilt while serving as a graduate assistant. Upon completion she hopes to continue addressing the issues of higher education for minority students.

"I don't know if that means teaching, research, or policy advocacy for students of color," said Lee, "I want to give more of a chance to others, if that is their desire, to work through cultural implications, to be proactive in the K-12 arena and when they graduate from high school they are more ready than the generation before."

The professors at Union built a foundation for Lee by teaching her not to put life into compartments, but rather see the overall picture of how everything fits together as a cohesive unit of service—to think Christianly.

"Through the influence of professors, the way faculty teach and leaders lead at Union, it's obvious that they're living Christ-like in all they do. It flows all together. We do not need to compartmentalize, instead be excellent in studies, work and every part of life," said Lee, "because God is in every part of life."

"I saw it first hand at Union University—it can be seamless. I don't have to be or think a certain way only in certain circles. Education can be excellent and cutting edge, if you will, and I don't have to choose that over a Christian worldview." ☞

Matt Adams ('02)

*Investment Banker
Morgan Keegan & Company, Birmingham, Ala.*

Morgan Keegan & Company is its name and issuing bonds is its game. For 2002 economics/finance graduate Matt Adams, the world of finances and networking has been a major factor in his life.

"Union gave me a strong groundwork to know enough to get the job," Adams said. "The foundation I got at Union can't be replaced. Without Union, I wouldn't be where I am today."

Scott Lawyer, associate professor of management, helped Adams network and get an internship at Morgan Keegan & Company in January of his senior year, which ultimately led to a full-time job there.

"He [Lawyer] was a valuable resource and went beyond the call of duty as a professor," Adams said. "He still takes an interest in my life: where I'm at and what I'm doing."

When Adams first entered Union, he had a completely different view on the world of business and his role in the kingdom of God.

"Before Union I would have viewed what I do as a job or a paycheck," Adams said. "After Union I view it more as a calling and a way to make a difference."

Adams is grateful for his Christ-centered education that he received from Union.

"Everything at Union is Christ-centered and once you get into the workforce you're in the minority," Adams said. "All the classes and professors prepared me to be in the minority and go against the grain."

Autumn Ridenour '02

Graduate Student
 Yale Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.

If you spend a few minutes with Autumn Ridenour, a 2002 Christian ethics major, you'll quickly discover her heart beats to share a theology which includes God to the world around her. This passion is what sent her to Yale Divinity School after graduating from Union.

"I loved reading about past thinkers and how our sinful nature has been around since the beginning," Ridenour said.

Ridenour is pursuing a two-year master of arts and religion program at Yale University and aspires to one day teach ethics. She will be graduating May 2005 and is hoping to work toward a Ph.D.

"God's providential hand led me to Union," Ridenour said. "It wasn't by accident that Union had an ethics program, which is unique at the undergraduate level."

Through lecture series and various speakers from around the country and world coming to speak to students at Union, Ridenour was challenged to think about her faith outside of the classroom. "Union was a great opportunity to be consumed with ideas and see these ideas put into practice," Ridenour said. "Integrating Christianity and education is a living reality; you never stepped out of it at Union."

As Ridenour attends Yale, she is cultivating her own views and using the building blocks of her education from Union to communicate her faith to others.

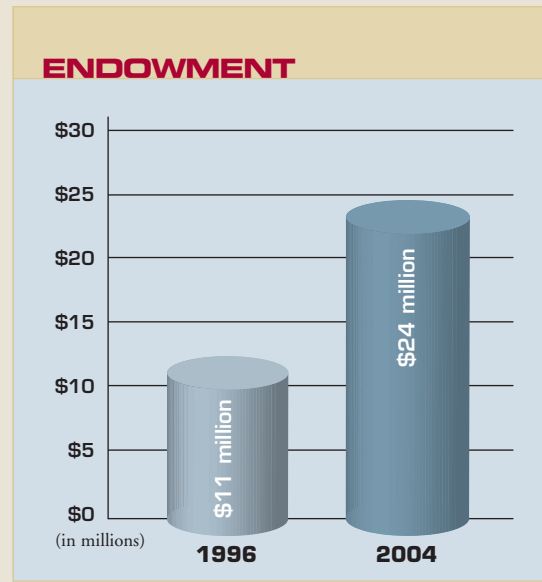

"I'm fine tuning my arguments (at Yale) and integrating my presuppositions I learned at Union," Ridenour said. "I'm where the rubber meets the road."

As Ridenour progresses through the MAR program at Yale, she is grappling with real world issues and struggles to communicate the authority of scripture to the world.

"I'm a work in progress," Ridenour said. "I have a voice and God's allowed me to be here (at Yale.) There's always an element you don't know until you're there. Sometimes you have to go through experiences yourself." @

Dow Davidson ('00)

Attorney
Burr & Furman LLP, Birmingham, Ala.

Hard work. Sweat. Patience. Endurance. These terms best describe the endeavor to become a lawyer, especially for Dow Davidson, a 2000 Union business graduate.

Davidson began working in September at Burr & Forman LLP, a law firm with 150 attorneys located in Birmingham, Ala. He completed law school in May and recently took the bar exam.

"Taking the bar exam was an opportunity. It was a really, really tough experience," Davidson said. "I had to keep it all in perspective because everyone practicing law had to go through this."

While taking the bar exam was one of the most challenging aspects of Davidson's pursuit of a law career, he says the solid educational foundation that he received from Union prepared him.

"The professors told me what to expect and allowed me to be intellectually and academically prepared," Davidson said. "They mentally prepared me for the rigors of a law school. Union was instrumental to my success in law school." Davidson says combining faith with learning was a vital part to his overall experience.

"Union is truly special in contrast to other places," Davidson said. "Being serious about your faith and making it the top priority was encouraged and accepted."

As a student geared toward the law profession, the issue of ethics was an essential issue addressed by Davidson's professors.

"Looking at things through a lens of faith was what was most profitable," Davidson said. "Being a Christian is part of who I am and is a challenge and expectation to live that out to people."

Even as Davidson moves on in his career path, he still is able to keep in touch with some of his professors

"I played golf with Coach (Andy) Rushing the last time I was back because I played (baseball) for him while at Union," Davidson said. 🏆

Josh Trent ('01)

*Public Service
Bush Administration, Washington, D.C.*

Josh Trent ('01) serves in the office of presidential personnel—to the president of the United States. The chief executive has the authority to appoint a percentage of federal positions. Trent takes his involvement in identifying, recruiting and recommending appointees for such positions seriously. "A lot of research is done before making a recommendation. We look for a broad (administration) buy in," said Trent, "it's also important to determine if someone can bring more than good skill sets to the table. Their skills must fit within the dynamics of working in a group, as well." Trent views his job as a ministry opportunity. "A biblical worldview says all Christians should be full-time," Trent said, "there's no division between secular and Christian. All our life should be submitted (to God). "I understand government as a God-ordained institution for good and that God cares about government," he said. "My challenge is to use that or lose that opportunity." Union played a key role in helping Trent develop this outlook on his career path. "My professors saw their discipline as part of the created order and all truth as God's truth," Trent said, "Union prepared me for work at the White House with its emphasis on servant leadership and excellence." As Trent works in the White House, he is perpetually reminded of the importance of excellence and servanthood. "You must be excellent at your craft to be taken seriously," Trent said. "I work with excellence to be a servant to the boss, to get the job done and to be professional. "Graduates who want to make a difference in the world must first know their craft well, be faithful to God and glorify Him," he said. ☞
