New service award presented

The first Barnabas Leadership Award was presented to Rebecca Carlson and Michelle Hardee during Awards Day ceremonies Friday, May 7 in the G. M. Savage Memorial Chapel. This new award is designed to honor juniors who have significantly contributed to serving University and the local community. Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

Carlson, social work major, said that her motivation behind her serving comes from the example of Jesus Christ. She sights John 3:30 as her verse of inspiration, “He must become greater, and I must become less.”

“My life is not my own. The scripture tells us that in everything we do we should glorify God. Also, by being a servant, I can demonstrate Christ’s love and help lead others to Christ,” said Carlson.

During her time at Union, Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

Carlson, social work major, said that her motivation behind her serving comes from the example of Jesus Christ. She sights John 3:30 as her verse of inspiration, “He must become greater, and I must become less.”

“My life is not my own. The scripture tells us that in everything we do we should glorify God. Also, by being a servant, I can demonstrate Christ’s love and help lead others to Christ,” said Carlson.

During her time at Union, Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

New service award presented

By Ellie Evans
Editor-in-Chief

The first Barnabas Leadership Award was presented to Rebecca Carlson and Michelle Hardee during Awards Day ceremonies Friday, May 7 in the G. M. Savage Memorial Chapel. This new award is designed to honor juniors who have significantly contributed to serving Union University and the local community. Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

Carlson, social work major, said that her motivation behind her serving comes from the example of Jesus Christ. She sights John 3:30 as her verse of inspiration, “He must become greater, and I must become less.”

“My life is not my own. The scripture tells us that in everything we do we should glorify God. Also, by being a servant, I can demonstrate Christ’s love and help lead others to Christ,” said Carlson.

During her time at Union, Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

Carlson, social work major, said that her motivation behind her serving comes from the example of Jesus Christ. She sights John 3:30 as her verse of inspiration, “He must become greater, and I must become less.”

“My life is not my own. The scripture tells us that in everything we do we should glorify God. Also, by being a servant, I can demonstrate Christ’s love and help lead others to Christ,” said Carlson.

During her time at Union, Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

New service award presented

By Ellie Evans
Editor-in-Chief

The first Barnabas Leadership Award was presented to Rebecca Carlson and Michelle Hardee during Awards Day ceremonies Friday, May 7 in the G. M. Savage Memorial Chapel. This new award is designed to honor juniors who have significantly contributed to serving Union University and the local community. Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

Carlson, social work major, said that her motivation behind her serving comes from the example of Jesus Christ. She sights John 3:30 as her verse of inspiration, “He must become greater, and I must become less.”

“My life is not my own. The scripture tells us that in everything we do we should glorify God. Also, by being a servant, I can demonstrate Christ’s love and help lead others to Christ,” said Carlson.

During her time at Union, Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

Carlson, social work major, said that her motivation behind her serving comes from the example of Jesus Christ. She sights John 3:30 as her verse of inspiration, “He must become greater, and I must become less.”

“My life is not my own. The scripture tells us that in everything we do we should glorify God. Also, by being a servant, I can demonstrate Christ’s love and help lead others to Christ,” said Carlson.

During her time at Union, Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

New service award presented

By Ellie Evans
Editor-in-Chief

The first Barnabas Leadership Award was presented to Rebecca Carlson and Michelle Hardee during Awards Day ceremonies Friday, May 7 in the G. M. Savage Memorial Chapel. This new award is designed to honor juniors who have significantly contributed to serving Union University and the local community. Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

Carlson, social work major, said that her motivation behind her serving comes from the example of Jesus Christ. She sights John 3:30 as her verse of inspiration, “He must become greater, and I must become less.”

“My life is not my own. The scripture tells us that in everything we do we should glorify God. Also, by being a servant, I can demonstrate Christ’s love and help lead others to Christ,” said Carlson.

During her time at Union, Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

New service award presented

By Ellie Evans
Editor-in-Chief

The first Barnabas Leadership Award was presented to Rebecca Carlson and Michelle Hardee during Awards Day ceremonies Friday, May 7 in the G. M. Savage Memorial Chapel. This new award is designed to honor juniors who have significantly contributed to serving Union University and the local community. Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

Carlson, social work major, said that her motivation behind her serving comes from the example of Jesus Christ. She sights John 3:30 as her verse of inspiration, “He must become greater, and I must become less.”

“My life is not my own. The scripture tells us that in everything we do we should glorify God. Also, by being a servant, I can demonstrate Christ’s love and help lead others to Christ,” said Carlson.

During her time at Union, Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

New service award presented

By Ellie Evans
Editor-in-Chief

The first Barnabas Leadership Award was presented to Rebecca Carlson and Michelle Hardee during Awards Day ceremonies Friday, May 7 in the G. M. Savage Memorial Chapel. This new award is designed to honor juniors who have significantly contributed to serving Union University and the local community. Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.

Carlson, social work major, said that her motivation behind her serving comes from the example of Jesus Christ. She sights John 3:30 as her verse of inspiration, “He must become greater, and I must become less.”

“My life is not my own. The scripture tells us that in everything we do we should glorify God. Also, by being a servant, I can demonstrate Christ’s love and help lead others to Christ,” said Carlson.

During her time at Union, Carlson and Hardee will each be awarded $1,000 and will be asked to donate $250 of that money to the charitable organization of their choice.